Jennifer Creedon is a trial attorney who represents large and small companies in asbestos litigation, product liability litigation, and business litigation. Whether a company's litigation is confined to one lawsuit or requires a multi-lawsuit solution, Jen can craft a defense strategy that fits the company's needs.

Jen has defended toxic tort and product liability actions in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. She has served as local, regional and national counsel for companies involved in toxic tort and asbestos litigation. Jen has been part of a national counsel team for a Fortune 500 company and designed national trial strategy, involving preparation of corporate witnesses, expert witnesses and drafted nationwide discovery. In that capacity, she has handled cases in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Washington. Additionally, she has handled Federal Multidistrict Litigation including cases consolidated in MDL 875 (In Re: Asbestos Product Liability Litigation (No. VI)) and the Maritime Docket (MARDOC). As an adjunct to handling a company's complex litigation, Jen can coordinate compliance with the Medicare Secondary Payer Act and all associated regulations and legislation including the Medicare, Medicaid and the SCHIP Extension Act of 2007 (MMSEA/Mandatory Settlement Reporting).

Jen has defended product liability and toxic tort cases involving a wide range of chemicals, resins, paints, construction products, joint compounds and wallboards, roofing materials, floor tiles, refractory products, boilers, brakes and other automobile components, refineries, shipyards, and industrial and chemical premises. Jen has an in-depth understanding of regulations, industry standards, state-of-the-art defenses, industrial hygiene defenses, medical defenses, and experts in both product and premise based toxic tort litigation. She has defended design defect cases relating to bicycles, construction equipment, industrial equipment and medical equipment. Jen has prepared and argued appeals before the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and the Massachusetts Appellate Court.

Jen has years of experience defending talc defendants and is poised to defend any company involved in the newly emerging and new frontier of talc litigation. Jen is cognizant of the high stakes nature of this possible “next asbestos” and is highly vigilant in representing her clients to protect their bottom lines.
